To whom it may concern,

I've been Elijah's computer science teacher for the last three years of his high school experience. Elijah is a fantastic student who is dedicated to learning and improving himself in the computer science field. He's a hard worker and has a great understanding of programming that will benefit him greatly in his career.

Elijah has a very positive attitude. He took all the computer science classes that were offered at AFHS, and excelled in all of them. He has a great mind for programming. Because he advanced past the most rigorous computer science classes offered at our school, he received a scholarship for enrollment into the Bottega bootcamp, an career-prep program where he learned the skills he needs to be a full stack developer. Elijah excelled at this program and completed it in less than a year.

In addition to the programming bootcamp he completed, Elijah also worked with a classmate to develop their own AI, a voice-activated program similar in function to Amazon Alexa or Google's voice assistant. In completing this project, Elijah showed his ability to work well with others. He and his classmate worked very well together and created this impressive program. This project was completely driven by his passion and love for computer science; he received no grade or other external reward for his efforts.

Elijah has a great future ahead of him in the computer science field, and I highly recommend him for any jobs for which he may apply. He's a fast learner and a good team player.
